Introduction of YEPC

The International Peace Youth Group (IPYG), the world's largest youth organization operating in 128 countries, implements the Youth Empowerment Peace Class (YEPC), an informal peace education program designed to enhance the capabilities of young people.

YEPC provides youth with practical knowledge and a peace-oriented mindset to address key youth-related challenges.

Since its launch in 2020, the program has engaged approximately 3,000 participants, and continues to introduce new educational content each year to reflect evolving youth-related issues.

Introduction of YEPC

IPYG's Education Program 2024 Youth Empowerment Peace Class

To engage youth in contributing to the creation of a better world through their passion.
To explore new knowledge and take initiative in their own lives as youth.

The program blends practical skills with core peace values across a variety of educational courses.

Parenting Education

Supports young individuals who became parents early due to child marriage or conflict.

Youth Health Education

Raises awareness of drug-related risks and promoting mental and physical well-being.

Career Education

Equips young people with industry-relevant vocational skills to adapt to changing job markets.

Leadership Education

Explores the history of war, leadership, and youth engagement in peacebuilding.

Introduction of YEPC

Following these courses, participants engage in interactive assignments and peace campaigns to apply what they have learned.

Through YEPC, participants expand their expertise in diverse fields and recognize the role of youth in fostering sustainable peace.

The program encourages young people to critically examine barriers to peace and take proactive steps toward resolution.

Introduction of YEPC

YEPC empowers youth to become peace advocates, leading positive change within their communities and expanding their influence globally.

Furthermore, YEPC supports the achievement of Quality Education, one of the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), while contributing to UNESCO's vision for lifelong learning.

Youth Health Education

“First Aid Training”

- Recognize the importance of first aid in handling trauma and outdoor emergencies.
- Apply learned skills to daily life situations.

Participant Interviews

“The first aid training was very informative. As someone who suffers from low blood pressure, I often feel extremely cold, even in the hottest season. I learned how to keep warm and what essentials are needed to manage it. I also learned how to use water bottles and prepare correct tea mixture to help regulate body temperature.”

“It was amazing. I learned many new things today, and I am confident this course will be useful in the future. I now know how to respond to emergency situations, which can help save a lives. I would be happy to share this knowledge with others.”

Participant Interviews

“I found the articles of the DPCW really interesting and learned about different way to achieve peace, including the influence of ethnicity and religion.”

Youth Leadership Education

Participant Interviews

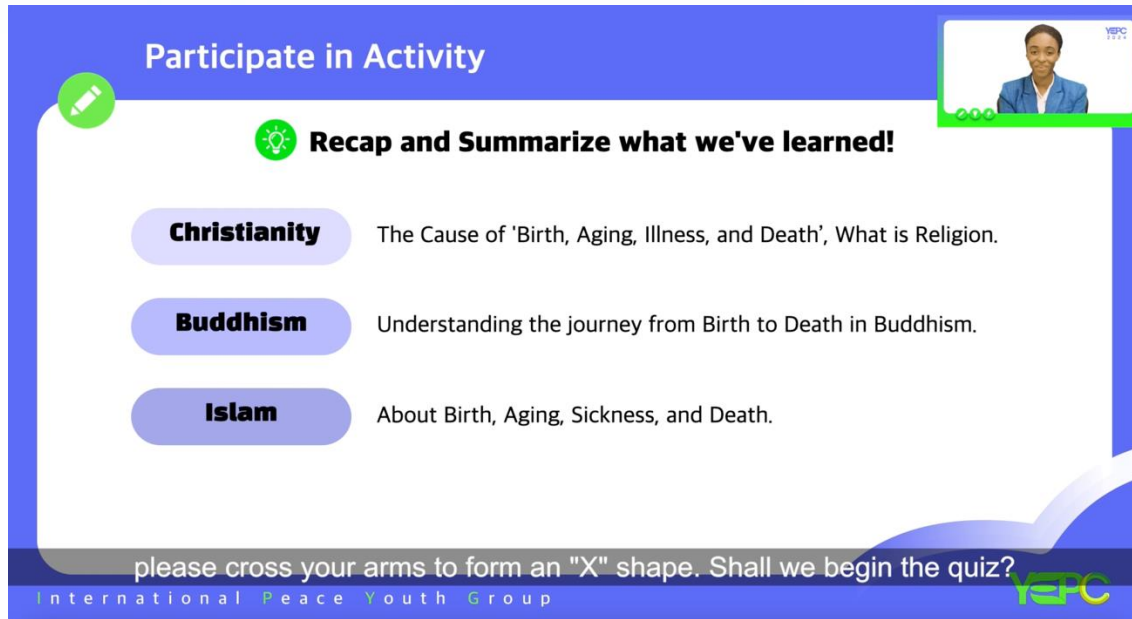

"Lecture was informative. Engaging youths and mentioning war is good thing. People keep position and give us messages; we youths are being abused to go ahead and be front line of war. I am glad to have this kind of educational platform, it is going to help us a lot. A lot of young people do not have the opportunity to attend this kind of platform."

"I heard an interesting statement: 'Get rid of these world wars'. It reminded me of the horrors we have witnessed. We must confront and overcome these challenges by changing people's mindsets. As youth, we have the capability and responsibility to educate others and initiate change from where we stand."

"In observing how peace has been established across various regions, I was particularly impressed by a comprehensive chart accompanied by videos and graphs. These visuals illustrated the timeline of world wars, the losses each nation endured, and the eventual transition to peace along with the current state of these countries? This made me realize that establishing peace is critical for the future of our people and generations to come."

Participant Interviews

"It was very interesting. I learned about different cultures and that we must accept each other's beliefs, we must not discriminate between different religions."

"It was very helpful for me and learned about peace among the peoples. We have discussed relevant issues about peace and education. How we can work for peace specially in Pakistan. "

Religion and Peace Education

"About Birth, Aging, Sickness, and Death"

- Promote understanding of different religions and cultures through the study of scriptures, fostering religious and cultural exchanges.
- Overcome misunderstandings and baseless accusations that lead to extremism and violence against religions by fostering efforts to understand the scriptures, which are the essential teachings of religion, thereby spreading a culture of peace.
